Bachelor of Arts (Hons) Accounting & Finance

University of East London, UK

Accountancy is about providing financial information to many different types of people: managers, investors, lenders, suppliers of goods and services, customers, and governmental agencies amongst others. The complex nature of business and organisations demands a high level of skill in analysing and interpreting financial data, so that accountants are always in demand.

Accountancy is of central importance to a business: a reflection of its crucial nature is that many of the senior managers in companies of all sizes started their career as accountants.

The BA (Hons) Accounting & Finance gives students the opportunity to acquire the in-depth knowledge of Accounting & Finance and the range of skills they need to embark on a successful career in accounting or in the finance area, a professional qualification or postgraduate study.

You do not need prior knowledge of accounting to join the programme: the first year provides a foundation in accounting and related subjects. In their third year, modules contain a large element of independent research and learning, and students undertake a research-based module where they investigate and report on a topic reflecting their own interests.

Past accounting graduates have obtained senior positions in a variety of areas, both in accounting and in the wider business field.

Programme Details

- Duration: 3 years; 6 semesters
- Assessment is based on a combination of coursework and examination. (Coursework may include case study analysis, essays, reports, skills portfolio, financial model construction and project presentations)
- Degree classifications are based on performance in the second and third level modules, with third level modules being more heavily weighted.

Professional Recognition

Upon completion of the BA (Hons) Accounting & Finance degree, students are eligible for exemptions from a maximum of 9 papers offered in the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants (ACCA) qualification. In addition, the course enables students to develop skills and knowledge that will help graduates prepare for the ACCA Level 3 examinations.

Note: It is anticipated that this will be extended to the programme offered at the Legenda Education Group but this is subject to final approval from ACCA.
